WNTC Reopening Delayed by Construction

The return of Campus Station WNTC to the air for the Spring semester has been postponed indefinitely because of construction now going on in the studios. In rendering this decision, the Executive Board of the station felt that going on the air now, without construction completed, would only necessitate the cessation of operations in order to complete the station at some later date during the term.

Included in the present building is a new transmitter which is expected to better reception of the station in Potsdam. In addition, the large studio is being completed, and finishing touches are being added to the control room and the record library.

The Programming Department of the Campus Station plans to add several hours to broadcasting time upon the station's reopening. These will include a morning program, much the same as that presented during the Spring of 1948.
